

MLA Works Cited Page Alphabetical Order – Top 10 Best Writing Services for Perfect Formatting (2026)

Struggling with MLA works cited page alphabetical order? You're not alone. Formatting references correctly—especially arranging sources alphabetically—remains one of the most common academic challenges for students. Even small mistakes in MLA citation formatting can cost valuable grades.

In this comprehensive guide, we not only explain how alphabetical order works in MLA citation style, but also review the top 10 best writing services that can help you create flawless works cited pages, essays, and research papers.

Quick Answer: In MLA format, entries on a works cited page must be listed in alphabetical order by the author's last name. If no author is available, use the first significant word of the title (excluding “a,” “an,” or “the”).

Why MLA Works Cited Alphabetical Order Matters

Correct MLA formatting ensures clarity, academic integrity, and readability. Professors expect strict adherence to rules such as:

- Alphabetizing by author's last name
- Ignoring articles like "The" or "A"
- Using hanging indents
- Maintaining consistent citation structure

Because these rules can be tedious, many students turn to professional writing services for help.
